Says DP To Be Out Of Germany By Fall

Former Governor Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, said in Paris that if the present emigration program is continued, the problem of Jewish displaced persons in Germany "should become history" before the end of this year.

Mr. Lehman, former director of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, arrived in Paris after a week's tour of the American zone of Germany, went to Marseille and from there sailed to Israel aboard an Israel ship, the Hegbah, along with about a thousand immigrants to the new Jewish homeland.

There are about 40,000 Jewish displaced persons remaining in the American zone, Mr. Lehman said. If emigration continues at its present rate of 10,000 to 12,000 a month, the last of these should leave sometime next fall.

Mr. Lehman said he felt "extremely hopeful" that the displaced persons act would be amended to cover refugees who entered D.P. camps up to the end of 1948, and to remove some of the "technical difficulties" which restrict immigration to the United States under the present law.

Urges Aid At Home As Well As To Israel

American Jews were urged to support their own religious and educational institutions as zealously as they extended aid to Jews [illegible]

[illegible] addresses of the Jewish Theological Seminary's national planning and campaign committee, the central theme of speakers was that the Jews of the U. S. could attain spiritual maturity only by applying to their own institutions the same spirit of sacrifice that characterized their charity to foreign peoples.

"Virtually every Jewish community in this country is building new synagogues or is enlarging its present ones," Maxwell Abbell of Chicago, committee chairman, told the 192 delegates. "But the leaders of these synagogues now find themselves confronted with a dearth of spiritual leadership and educational guidance.

Aims To Teach Hebrew To One Million U.S. Jews

The first American Conference for Hebrew and Language and Culture meeting in New York, adopted a comprehensive program for widespread dissemination of the Hebrew language and culture in America, aimed at teaching Hebrew to 1,000,000 Jews.

Five hundred delegates, including educators, scholars and scientists, attended the final meeting at the Barbizon-Plaza Hotel and elected Samuel J. Borowsky as president of the Hebrew Federation of America (Histadruth Ivrith), sponsor of the conference.

The program called for the stressing of "Hebrew and Hebraic activities in American Jewish life, as a means of raising the cultural level of American Jewry." The activities are to embrace promotion of Hebrew elementary and secondary education, adult Hebrew education, Hebrew literature and scholarship.

The program also called for the creation of a council, composed of representatives of national Jewish organizations, "to coordinate the work of the Hebrew Federation of America within the various organizations of national and local levels."

Mr. Borowsky asserted that the conference had "served to invigorate the forces of American Jewry who must construct a cultural bridge between this country and the Jews of Israel."

Aubrey Eilath, Israeli representative to the United Nations, asserted that the "future of the Jewish state depends to a very great extent on the strengthening of its cultural and spiritual bonds with world Jewry, particularly with the Jews of the United States."

Mr. Eilath said the establishment of Israel "should quickly removed [illegible] curtain, of which your conference and the program are a concrete and vital expression."

"The responsibility for this unhappy situation must rest with those faint-hearted men and women who do not realize that American Jewry's philanthropic shoulders are broad enough to carry the responsibility for our own spiritual growth as well as for the physical survival of our brethren overseas."

Dr. Simon Greenberg, acting president of the Seminary, declared that the "persistent calls for a moratorium of constructive Jewish effort in America come only from those who timidly underestimate our energies and our resources."

Vast N.Y. Throng Hails First Anniversary Of Israeli State

A singing, joyous throng estimated by police at 150,000 persons jammed Madison Square Park and adjacent streets in New York in celebration of the first anniversary of the creation of the State of Israel.

In a meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria, Dr. Chaim Weizmann, first President of Israel, leading world Jewry in the thanksgiving, gave calm but certain assurance that the prediction of the prophet Isaiah of singing and gladness in Zion would come to pass.

The Waldorf-Astoria meeting, sponsored by the United Jewish Appeal, heard Governor Thomas E. Dewey assert that the United Nations decision that led to the creation of the State of Israel was one of the most important achievements of the new body. The U. N. decision, Governor Dewey said, "represents tangible proof that we are making progress in developing a peaceful instrument for the preservation of peace for all mankind."

Although the meeting at Madison Square, sponsored by the American Zionist Emergency Council, was announced for, and started at 4 p.m., crowds began gathering at noon. By the time Dr. Weizmann delivered a brief, extemporaneous address to conclude the session at 6 p.m., thousands had been wedged into an almost immovable mass for hours.

At one point a woman fainted and the movement of the throng knocked down eleven other persons. Three were trampled and sent to Bellevue Hospital for treatment of injuries described as not serious.

The crowd extended on Madison Avenue from Twenty-third to Twenty-sixth Streets, and down side streets to Fourth Avenue. The walks in the park were jammed solid with spectators all the way [illegible] Avenue, reports the New York Herald Tribune.

[illegible] the crowd against pushing, but on several occasions the throng surged toward the speakers' stand, shoving the police line like bobbing corks. The police set up wooden barriers to keep the crowds from the speakers' stand, and these barriers had to be reinforced by additional wooden props placed at right angles and braced against curbstones. Several of the iron railings on the edge of the grass were bent almost to the ground by the weight of those against them.

Among the speakers at Madison Square Park were Dr. Weizmann, Mayor William O'Dwyer, Dr. Isaac Halevi Herzog, chief rabbi of Israel; Dr. Abba Hillel Silver, leading American Zionist; and Dr. Emanuel Neumann, president of the Zionist Organization of America.

The Zionist Emergency Council, sponsors of the Madison Square Park meeting, conducted a second meeting and concert at Carnegie Hall at which most of the speakers at the outdoor rally appeared. The U.J.A. dinner at the Waldorf marked Dr. Weizmann's final public appearance in the United States on his trip.

Dr. Weizmann reiterated his appeal for American Jewry to support the campaign of the U.J.A. which this year seeks to raise $250,000,000 for Israel. Describing the tide of immigration as so great "we shall be crushed if we are thrown upon our own resources," Dr. Weizmann said that the Jews of the United States hold the keys to the future of Israel.

Israel, Dr. Weizmann said, will make every sacrifice, taxing its citizens heavily, doing without luxuries and even necessities, but it is up to American Jews to provide funds for the thousands of newcomers entering the country each month.

Despite the hardships involved in absorbing large numbers of immigrants into a small country, Israel will keep its doors open and will absorb 250,000 newcomers this year. "Nothing will be permitted to jeopardize that immigration program," he asserted.

During the dinner, checks totalling $15,451,920 representing contributions to the U. J. A. were presented to Dr. Weizmann. Referring to these contributions, and to what they will mean to Israel, Dr. Weizmann turned to the Bible for illustration.

"I was deeply impressed as I listened tonight to the announcements of cash brought to this meeting," he said. "The money that you have accumulated is important in itself. It will buy the essentials of life. To an equal degree it is encouraging to me, as I return to Israel, as a token that American Jewry takes seriously its partnership with Israel in the reconstruction of our people in our land.

"Only a few years ago, the blight of the D. P. camps seemed a problem that would take years and years to solve. And yet, in an amazingly short time, the camps are closing; the blight is a memory. The crisis we face now will also pass. In place of the tents in Israel there will be decent homes. In place of waiting, there will be creative effort. In place of mobilization for defense, there will be peace, lasting peace and brotherly understanding.

"Always and steadily we are narrowing the confines of the impossible. In Israel, the prophets seem to have left us not so much with a prediction as with a challenge — as if those magnificent sentences of theirs formed a great question—which we must answer:

And the ransomed of the Lord shall return,
And come with singing unto
Zion,
And everlasting joy shall be upon their heads;
They shall obtain gladness
and joy,
And sorrow and sighing shall flee away.

"Shall these things come to pass? We shall make good the word of Isaiah. That highway will be there —a way for the redeemed, the 'ransomed of the Lord.' And it will be paved with your help, by our hands. Without you, the Jews of America, how shall we build it?"

Dr. Weizmann drew another Biblical parallel, comparing Israel in the recent war with the Arab states with David fighting Goliath. He noted that at the outset of the war military experts accorded to Israel very little chance of defeating its enemies. But the experts, he said, had not considered that the Israelis were determined never to abandon their home soil but to die fighting on it if necessary.

Tracing the early days of Israel's [illegible] "some of us in Israel did not know whether we were signing the birth certificate or death warrant of the Jewish state."

Israel's war, he said, has been waged on three fronts, against invaders, to keep its economic machine going in the face of tremendous demands on it, and to keep the doors of the country open to immigrants.

Governor Dewey, after emphasizing the importance to the world of the U. N. decision that led to the establishment of Israel, called for continued support for America's program of aid to the free nations of Europe, called for Israel's admission to the U. N. and for the safeguarding of Jerusalem as a city sacred to three religions.

"The American people have adopted a program of aid for the free nations of Europe with the support of both political parties and I earnestly hope that that program will continue to be fully supported," Governor Dewey said.

"It is also our traditional policy to assist underdeveloped nations through private capital. We have an opportunity and duty to lend our genius and technical skills as well, to help carry forward the building of a practical, solid economic structure which supports the humanitarianism with which Israel was founded.

"There are other problems, of course, which clamor for solution. I am earnestly hopeful that the admission of the State of Israel to the United Nations will soon be an accepted fact. We all hope also that a swift and a universally satisfactory solution will be found to the problems of Jerusalem. It is a city sacred to three religions. Is-

2,000 GET TO VIENNA FROM HUNGARY

Two thousand Jews who had fled from Hungary into Czechoslovakia in pairs and small groups and had assembled in Bratislava, arrived unexpectedly in Vienna. As a result the Rothschild Hospital and the Arnberg School, the only available Jewish centers in Vienna, were filled to overflowing, most of the male members of the convoy being forced to sleep on the floors. This is the second group of Hungarian Jews to escape surreptitiously since the negotiations between the Zionist agencies and Hungary's Communist-dominated Government had broken down and Zionist agents were expelled from the country.

Discoverer Of Streptomycin Assigns Royalty Of $1,250,000 To Rutgers University

Dr. Selman A. Waksman, the discoverer of streptomycin, has assigned to Rutgers University $1,250,000 which patent rights on the drug would bring him.

Dr. Waksman, who has won many scientific honors, was born July 2, 1888, in Priluka, a small town in the Ukraine. He left Russia because of political oppression and lack of educational opportunity, obtained his Bachelor of Science degree at Rutgers in 1915, a Master's degree, 1916, and received a Doctor of Philosophy degree from the University of California in 1918.

Dr. Waksman is chairman of the Department of Microbiology, College of Agriculture and Experiment Station, Rutgers University, at New Brunswick, N.J. He has the faculty rank of professor and research specialist.

The Russian-born scientist, who came to the United States in 1910 and helped get himself through college by working in a greenhouse at 20 cents an hour, has spurned an opportunity to harvest a private fortune out of one of the most important medical discoveries of the century, says the New York Herald Tribune.

That discovery turned on the isolation, in one case from the throat of a chicken and in a second case from a heavily manured field, of bacterial strains of streptomycin griseus, a soil microbe. In later replanting in the earth, this microbe yielded strains from which streptomycin, an antibiotic, was reaped. An antibiotic is a substance produced by a living microbe which destroys or inhibits the growth of other microbes.

Working on clues which he had been sifting since 1915, Dr. Waksman and one of his students, Albert Schatz, succeeded in isolating the two strains in 1942 and 1943. Laboratory tests indicated that these strains produced an antibiotic effective against the germ which causes tuberculosis, and against a wide range of infective agents which come under the general classification of gram-negative types.

Ultimately streptomycin came to be used in the treatment of certain types of tuberculosis. Although it has limitations, it is the first widely accepted chemical of unquestioned merit to be used in tuberculosis therapy, and it raises the hope that scientists are on the trail of an agent which will control the disease.

The drug has also been used in such conditions, among others, as influenza meningitis, in urinary and blood infections and in certain intestinal infections.

Royalties on the drug, computed on a basis of 2½ per cent of the sale price, ran between $700,000 and $800,000 last year. What the ultimate royalty total may be is anybody's guess. Since the antibiotic field seems to be moving at a fast clip, there is the chance that a drug of greater value for certain conditions than streptomycin will be discovered. Such a discovery would probably reduce the income from streptomycin.

Dr. Robert C. Clothier, president, said that with the money the university would establish an Institute of Microbiology, with Dr. Waksman as the first director. Funds for a $1,000,000 building for the

The Canadian Jewish Review is still the only Jewish publication in Canada printed in any language reaching the Jewish community which is able to claim membership in the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Israel Sets Up Tent Cities

New evidence that immigration into Israel was reaching the saturation point was given when the Jewish Agency announced that 10,000 tents had been purchased to accommodate latest arrivals. The expenditure comes close to $4,000,000.

Transient camps can no longer adequately absorb the influx, and there is no room in the principal cities where persons of substantial means can barely find places to live. Prices are rising daily, living accommodation is becoming scarcer and everyone is looking forward to the proposed austerity program, which is intended to alleviate conditions, says the New York Times.

Besides the tent cities, Rabbi Israel Goldstein, the treasurer of the Jewish Agency, and the head of the national housing program, plans more than 20,000 permanent units - - room, kitchen, sanitary facilities — before the end of next year. Meanwhile, ordinary transient camps — most of them abandoned military reservations — have not been able to meet the emergency.

These tent cities, in appropriate parts of Israel, are intended to cover the gap between the present situation and the time when permanent housing will be available. These cities will get as many ordinary comforts as possible including sewers, water and foundations for tents. Top priority will be given to families rather than individuals, according to Dr. Goldstein.

There will be a kitchen and shower for every four families. Under ordinary standards this ratio could hardly be placed in a luxury category, but to some of these people, who have spent a large part of their lives in displaced persons camps, it may be considered more than they expected.

It has also been arranged that heads of families will be assigned to areas where they have employment or where employment is most probable.

It had been believed in some quarters that because of overcrowded conditions there might be some curb on unlimited immigration until the absorption capacity increased, but under this plan, it seems that the gates will remain wide open and everyone coming in will have to take what Americans call "pot luck."

GOTHIC GIRDLE

ANOTHER DOMINION CORSET CREATION

ENTER: THE DPs BY LEGAL PERMIT OF THE UNITED STATES

By Louis D. Lasker, In The Survey, Of New York

One crisp, sunny day last month I stood on a Hudson River pier watching the passengers leave a newly arrived ship. The last time I had been on a New York dock was almost ten years ago when I debarked from a liner which had left Europe just three days before Germany invaded Poland. Ours had been an escape de luxe from a Europe about to blow up in a devastating war. Today I had come to greet arrivals from Europe who had not been so fortunate as I. Europeans all, they had been caught in the catastrophe and had suffered experiences so devastating as to be almost beyond my powers of comprehension. The end of the war had brought them little comfort and for three years they had been living in camps for the displaced. I watched them as their pitiful baggage was examined by the customs — pitiful, but precious, for it represented all their worldly possessions. Except for their worn clothing they did not look "different"—as we are wont to think foreigners and immigrants must look. With few exceptions they might have mixed unnoticed with the native born population in any part of the United States.

The pier was a hubbub of movement and noise. Tears, laughter, shouts mingled with a Babel of strange tongues. Relative meeting relative wept or laughed aloud in the release of long pent up emotion. A few babies wailed in the excitement. But in the midst of the confusion there was order and dispatch. On the pier with me were representatives of the United States Displaced Persons Commission, the International Refugee Organization, and of six of the national welfare agencies that are cooperating with the commission in helping Europe's homeless take advantage of our Displaced Persons Act of 1948.

The agencies represented were: the War Relief Services of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; the United Service for New Americans; the Church World Service; Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society; the International Rescue and Relief Committee; and the Ukrainian Relief Committee. Each had a booth at the pier, around which newcomers, tagged with the agency's initials, rallied for instructions on what to do next. For most of the debarking passengers had come to this country under the auspices or at least through the services of one of these agencies. And the agency representatives were on hand to carry out the responsibility of getting them from the port of entry to the jobs and homes that awaited them in communities throughout the country.

The 399 arrivals on the 13,000-ton Marine Shark that day brought to 3,912 the total number of displaced persons who had come to the United States since October 30, when the first boatload of DP's eligible for entry under the new legislation steamed into New York Harbor. The reconverted army transport had been chartered by the International Refugee Organization—the UN agency responsible for moving displaced persons to and from assembly and processing centers throughout the world to countries of resettlement. Here was the seventh group of DP's—men, women and children—who had arrived under the terms of the Displaced Persons Act.

In accordance with the law's requirements, jobs and housing obtained by some interested individual or agency were awaiting each family somewhere in the United States. Sponsors or their delegates were ready to greet them. Transportation to their ultimate destinations had been secured. All these arrangements had been previously approved by the Displaced Persons Commission in Washington, set up to facilitate this latest hegira of the oppressed to our shores. The Marine Shark's passengers included artisans, farmers, professionals —a cross-section of a normal community, except that with the average age of twenty-nine, the group as a whole probably included a larger percentage of potentially productive individuals than most communities.

These people had gone through soul-searing experiences. One wondered how they had survived, why they had not lost hope. I talked to a few of them at random. They seemed to be consumed by an overwhelming emotion at their good fortune at coming to the United States and their determination to become real Americans as quickly as possible.

There was the tall, handsome professor of chemistry from Vienna, with his charming wife and pretty daughter of eighteen and a laughing blue-eyed little son of three, born in a DP camp in Germany. A political refugee, he was now on his way to a small college in Minnesota, where arrangements had been made, via a Lutheran minister, for him to be in the research department. "But only until he's more familiar with American ways," said his American aunt, explaining that the college needed a chemistry professor. Her own joy was tempered by the fact that the family could not stay with her for a while because a new semester at the college was about to begin. The man's wife, however, seemed anxious to get to Minnesota. "We must not look backward," she said.

Then there were the two sturdy peasants, originally from Augsburg and their five children, ages five to fifteen. They were on their way to a dairy farm in North Carolina where both the parents will work. The jobs were arranged for them by the Church World Service, whose representatives were looking after them on the dock. "We don't know our employers yet," the wife told me, "but we know we'll get along. For we're good dairy farmers, and we'll work night and day to make a home for our children."

One of the most poignant reunions I witnessed occurred between a young man and woman, both probably in their twenties. Man and wife, they had been parted nearly two years ago soon after they were married in a DP camp. The new bride came to this country shortly afterward under the German quota, but her husband, a Pole, had to await special litigation before he could get a visa. Now, thanks to the Displaced Persons Act he was here. Amid tears and laughter, they told me of the job awaiting him in Chicago, where the wife has been living with relatives.

I spoke to one man who stood apart from the rest, looking lonely and desolate. He told me he last saw his wife and daughter when they were all in Dachau, notorious concentration camp. "I was strong, I could work," he said. "They were weak, so they didn't let them live." He was en route to Newark, New Jersey, where he planned to continue his trade as shoemaker.

The youngest arrival was a healthy looking baby girl of eight months, who slept blissfully on a bench in the waiting room amid the noisy confusion. She was surrounded by admiring American relatives—ten of them! Her young parents were somewhere out on the cold dock not yet discharged—but the humane officials had given them permission to hand over the baby to the relatives so that she could be taken where it was warm. A cousin told me they were the only survivors of a wider family circle of "at least a hundred relatives—all victims of the Nazis." Their romance had also blossomed in a DP camp.

How much happiness or contentment any of these newcomers will find here depends on the attitude and actions of America at the grass roots. For they are headed for communities in every section of the country.

Interest at the grass roots is also the spark plug that sets in motion the complicated process of getting a displaced person out of an assembly center in Europe and into a job and home in an American community. For it takes an interested group or individual at the place where the DP will resettle, to find the job, home, and assurance against dependency that the law requires. The local communities are also the ultimate support of the voluntary national groups that are cooperating with the official agencies in administering the law.

Stimulating grass roots interest is one of the major functions of national voluntary agencies working with DP's. To this end they work largely through indigenous groups — social agencies, women's clubs, service clubs, churches and synagogues — to make them aware of the DP's, not only from the humanitarian point of view, but also in relation to the advantages that DP's selected for their special skills can bring to the communities.

When an individual or a group asks for a DP who may be known or unknown to the sponsor, the national agency sets the machinery going that will bring him here.

But the procedure is complicated and time-consuming. An "assurance" that the DP will not become a public charge and will have a job and housing on arrival must be initiated in the United States by a public or voluntary agency, a relative or a prospective employer.

BRAVE 13-YEAR-OLD GIRL SAVES BROTHERS AND SISTERS

1. The fire beyond control, Vivian got the children out of the house . . . and, clad in only a light dress, she started the trek to a farm house, a mile away.

2. After struggling half a mile through the deep snow, she collapsed. Keeping the two youngest with her, she urged the others to keep going.

3. When the farmer found Vivian, she was unable to stand. He drove her and the two children to his home. Then she was taken to hospital for treatment.

WINS DOW AWARD
VIVIAN HARPER
of Hodgson, Man.,
awarded tragedy on home horses
90 miles north of Winnipeg

13-year-old Vivian knew that it was up to her to save her 6 younger brothers and sisters. She tried to fight the flames, but when the blaze got out of control she took the children and started for the nearest house.

Exhausted from carrying two children, she collapsed . . . and told the others to carry on. It was below zero when the farmer arrived and picked up Vivian and her two charges.

Her heroism resulted in the saving of 6 lives. We are proud to present her The Dow Award.

IT TAKES TIME

Incorporated in April, 1886, the City of Vancouver was totally destroyed by fire two months later. Undaunted, the pioneers set to work again and within two years the new city had 18 miles of graded streets . . . 24 miles of sidewalks . . . wharves, docks, factories had been built . . . and the population had risen to 8,000. As time passed, Vancouver grew steadily, surely to its present position of Metropolis of Western Canada.

The passage of time plays its vital part, too, in the making of Harwood's Canadian Rye Whisky . . . slow maturing in fine oak casks brings it steadily, surely to peak mellowness . . . makes it, indeed, "Canada's Finest"!

A.J.C. Head Cited For Political Aid

Six hundred New York business, professional and civic leaders attended a dinner in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in honor of former Supreme Court Justice Joseph M. Proskauer, honorary president of the American Jewish Committee. The dinner was sponsored by the Joint Defense Appeal on behalf of the United Jewish Appeal of Greater New York.

In a message, Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion paid tribute to Mr. Proskauer, saying: "The people in Israel will never forget the noble efforts of Judge Proskauer in helping to secure the political conditions which facilitated the emergence of the Jewish State. American Jewry has a great share in the creation of Israel and the political efforts of Judge Proskauer have a high place in this great American Jewish contribution."

Declaring that Israel now "stands on the threshold of a real task on the ingathering hundreds and thousands of our brethren who wish to come to Israel," Mr. Ben-Gurion said that the immigrants must be "housed, clothed, fed, settled and enabled to play their part in building anew both their own lives and our liberated homeland."

He called on the guests to "stand by us in the coming years in the same spirit of solidarity and comradeship which you offered freely to us in the grim years of the past."

Mr. Proskauer, who recently completed six years as head of the American Jewish Committee, received a Joint Defense Appeal citation from Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink, national chairman of the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith. The citation praised Mr. Proskauer for his "five decades of statesmanlike leadership and distinguished services on behalf of Jewry throughout the world."

Citations from the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League of Bnai Brith were presented to four business leaders "for distinguished services to the Jewish people and outstanding leadership in the cause of democratic rights."

The citation, the first to be awarded jointly by the Joint Defense Appeal agencies, went to Simon H. Fabian, president of Fabian Theatres, Inc.; Maurice Levin, chairman of the board of Hearn's Department Store; Abraham Mazer, chairman of the board of the Hudson Pulp and Paper Corporation; and John P. Stevens Jr., president of J. P. Stevens and Co.

CLASS IN COOKERY

six eggs
one cup sugar
one-half pound almonds, crushed very fine juice of one-half lemon

Beat egg-yolks with the lemon, and one-half cup sugar. Beat the whites until very stiff, add the remainder of the sugar, and then fold in the whites and the crushed nuts. If desired, walnuts may be used instead of almonds; and if almonds are used, they do not need to be blanched before they are crushed. Pour mixture into an ungreased spring-form pan, and bake for about an hour, or until a toothpick inserted in cake comes out clean. The oven should be very slow, about 325-degrees. Turn cake out on rack until cool; and then remove pan.

Mocha Filling

two egg-yolks
one cup icing sugar
one-quarter cup very strong coffee
one-quarter pound butter

Mix all together, and beat until smooth, adding more icing sugar if mixture is not thick enough to spread over cake.

Mrs. J. Winthrop,
4372 Girouard Avenue, Montreal.

COCKTAIL KNISHES

three cups flour
one-half teaspoon salt
one egg
two teaspoons baking powder
three tablespoons fat

Mix above ingredients with enough cold water to make soft dough.

Filling:

one egg
four cups chopped beef and chopped chicken livers two onions chopped and browned in fat one cup mashed potatoes
one cup cooked buckwheat

Roll out pastry, fairly thin, cut in small circles, the size of a half dollar. Grind meats together, add onions, potatoes, and buckwheat. Beat egg, season, put one heaping tablespoon of meat mixture on each pastry circle, top with another pastry circle, pinch edges together in desired shape, bake at 400 degrees until browned.

After validation by the Displaced Persons Commission in Washington it goes to the commission's representative abroad, who locates the DP, if a specific person has been mentioned or, if not, selects someone on the basis of occupational skill.

Next comes certification from the IRO that the selectee is a bona fide DP, and then a careful check of his record by the Counter Intelligence Corps of the Army, and later by the FBI. All this material is studied both by the selector and a case analyst of the DP Commission before final approval. An approved DP and his family are transported to a resettlement center where they are examined by the U. S. Public Health and Consular Services prior to receiving visas. At the port of embarkation they undergo a final inspection by a representative of the U. S. Immigration and Naturalization Service. Theoretically the process is supposed to take about two months, but usually a much longer period is involved.

Take the Langowski family whom I talked to the day the Marine Shark docked. Mr. Langowski is a cabinet maker from Lwow, who spent six years in a concentration camp with his wife and two sons, aged three and four at the time of the Nazi invasion of Poland. Since the family has spent the four years since liberation in a DP camp in Austria, communal camp living is the only kind of life these children, now adolescents, remember.

Last summer Mr. Langowski wrote his cousin, Josef Zuber, a machinist living in Dallas, Texas, asking his aid in getting the family to the United States. Mr. Zuber went immediately to the Jewish Bureau of Social Service, having heard about the agency through a friend who was sending for his son. He told the interviewer that the furniture factory where he worked was in need of skilled workers and that his employer had promised to give a job to his cousin if he could get him here. He also said that since his daughter was being married and his son was going to another city to work, he would have room in his own home to take the family in. They would be crowded, but they could get along.

After verifying Mr. Zuber's statements, the agency forwarded his application to the United Service for New Americans which set in motion the machinery described above. In addition to being interviewed in their Austrian DP camp by representatives of the DP Commission and other agencies of the United States government, the Langowskis received a visit from an overseas representative of the USNA who later reported to New York on the family's background, aptitudes, and special needs. The report was turned over to the Jewish Bureau of Social Service in Dallas whose representative visited the Zubers to help them make arrangements for the elder Langowskis to receive English lessons and for the children to be enrolled in school. All this arranging, shuffling from camp to assembly center to embarkation point, examination and screening, and the securing of trans-Atlantic passage, took five months, so that the Langowskis did not set foot on an American bound vessel until the Marine Shark set sail from Hamburg late in January. They were met on the New York dock by a USNA representative with a ticket to Dallas, and in a few hours they were on the last lap of their long journey "home."

So intricate are the requirements of the law that red tape has held back all but a small fraction of the 205,000 displaced persons eligible to come to the U.S. before June 1950. But even fewer would have been able to get here if it had not been for the help of the national voluntary agencies. Besides the six agencies that sent representatives to meet the Marine Shark, several others may act directly as sponsors for DP's who know no individuals in this country to turn to for sponsorship. They include the American Friends Service Committee, the Mennonite Central Committee, the American Federation of International Institutes, the National Lutheran Council, the Unitarian Service Committee, and the United States Committee for the Care of European Children. Since a sponsoring agency must give the same "assurances" to the government as a sponsoring individual, the agency must rely on its "ties" in local communities to find the necessary jobs and housing. An Advisory Committee of Voluntary Agencies, composed of the twelve sponsoring organizations already mentioned, plus the National Travelers Aid Association and the National Social Welfare Assembly, meets regularly with the DP Commission to discuss problems and exchange suggestions.

The three agencies with the most ambitious programs are the War Relief Services of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the United Service for New Americans (Jewish), and the Church World Service, an association supported by twenty-three Protestant denominations.

Oldest in the field, the United Service for New Americans has had the most experience in resettlement work. Established in the beginning of the Hitler era, it has through the years built up regular financial support from an annual nationwide drive as well as connections in hundreds of local communities. Altogether, 350 local agencies are cooperating with it. For 1949, USNA hopes to receive $11,500,000 from the United Jewish Appeal.

The Church World Service and the War Relief Services of the National Catholic Welfare Conference only recently established their DP programs in response to recognition that 80 percent of the persons awaiting resettlement in DP camps are Catholic or Protestant in religious affiliation. The Church World Service is planning a drive for $18,424,388 to be raised largely through the churches of its twenty-three denominations; while the Catholic agency is calling on the resources of a strong united church. Catholic church authorities are appointing representatives in 110 dioceses to help develop and carry on the local phases of the work.

But success in the long run depends on local community attitudes, as a recent report from the Jewish Family Service of St. Paul so aptly reveals. Describing how forty-two families—all from DP camps—who have come to St. Paul since V-E day are getting along, the report says:

"We are happy to report that their adjustment in this country has been extremely successful. Ninety-eight percent of those who arrived were employed within four to six weeks and are self-supporting and contributing members of the communal life in St. Paul. These refugees are willing to accept any type of employment that was available and their employers report that they are conscientious and meticulous workers. The kinds of work in which they are employed cover a cross section of the industrial life of the city. These are: the meat packing industry, furniture making, clothing and leather goods, mechanics, sales work, accountants, dental technicians, and university professors. All the reports on our follow-up work indicate that these people are successful in their work.

"Socially and psychologically the adjustment also has been very satisfactory. Our newcomers are accepted by the community and have been taken into its various activities. They belong to religious, social and cultural organizations, attend Americanization classes and are eager to participate in the normal activities of a normal city.... All of them applied for citizenship almost immediately upon arrival. ... It is gratifying to see how the youngsters respond to the opportunity of an education, and how proud they are of being Ameri-

A new anti-Semitic magazine is being published by a group of Peruvian Fascists, the World Jewish Congress charged. Noting that the magazine, Temple, has a strong resemblance to periodicals published in Germany under Nazi directives, Dr. Robert S. Marcus, Political Director of the WJC, has asked the Peruvian Government to ban the publication. In a letter addressed to Don Humberto Fernandez-Davila, Peruvian Ambassador to the United States, Dr. Marcus noted that "this publication is the rallying point for dissident undemocratic elements in your country." Dr. Marcus' letter said that "We find it extremely difficult to believe that its only purpose is to attack the extremely small Jewish population of Peru . . . As you are probably aware, anti-Semitism has been used effectively by Fascist forces as an instrument for the realization of political power."

Fat is the most concentrated form of food energy we have. Being a high energy-supplier, fat has a special value for men doing hard physical work or active people such as teen-agers. The same high fuel value carries a danger to some people in the form of obesity which results from over-eating—although not necessarily just of fats.

LISTEN!

They're singing in the D.P. camps!

THE HEARTBREAKING STRUGGLE is all but over. Israel is a reality—her doors are open. Already—with our help—the camps have begun to close . . .

This month it's Bergen-Belsen, Landsberg, Leipheim, Eschwege—four camps to be closed forever. Four camps with their tragic history of blood and terror and torment and dreary waiting . . .

Now forty other camps must be closed—forty! We must help give these people a new home . . . the 25,000 that are streaming into Israel out of the D. P. camps and eastern Europe every month.

They know we'll help—they can't imagine it otherwise, after all we've given and done. That's why they're singing in the D. P. camps—the men and the women and the little children!

Singing because of their faith in us—faith that with our help they can live again with human dignity . . . work, play and enjoy a normal home and reasonable security.

We must not—we dare not let them down!

Getting down to figures . . .

$2,152,500 is needed as Toronto's share for the tremendous job of immigration and rehabilitation. 250,000 Jews must be brought to Israel alone during 1949—thousands more to Canada.

Please don't lose precious days waiting! We must start these people moving—quickly. Or else they may—because of unpredictable circumstances—lose their great chance. Let us not break their spirit by delay. It's now or never!

We can make possible the greatest homecoming in history. But action is needed now—lots of action. Give all you can. It's so very, very urgent!

Let's empty the camps in '49

"Housing has not created the difficulty we had anticipated. A widespread appeal to the Jewish community opened the doors of many homes who would not have considered 'roomers.' Several elderly widows allowed families to share kitchen privileges. The response of the entire community for these homeless people has been excellent. It has, in fact, helped with our total program, exclusive of refugee work, because many families who resisted sharing their homes previously were able to consider taking others into their homes once they 'had broken the ice'."

Definite information as to the present status of the 813 displaced persons who were the first to arrive last October under the new legislation is now available from the semi-annual reports required of each person admitted under the act. These firstcomers went to twenty-one states, 51 percent of them to large cities, 21 percent to other urban areas and 18 percent to rural areas. Ninety percent of the heads of families are employed and the remaining 10 percent are seeking employment. The largest number of employed persons include skilled and semi-skilled workers, service and domestic employees, farm workers and laborers. Only a negligible number have not been satisfactory to their sponsors and have had to turn to voluntary agencies for assistance since their arrival.

Of growing importance in DP resettlement are the official state commissions set up by the governors of several states. So far, there are twenty organized to determine the number of resettlement opportunities available within the states, and to prepare and help execute plans for coordination. Varying widely in size and degree of effectiveness, these commissions generally include heads of the various state departments or agencies, such as labor, agriculture, and housing, as well as representatives of large industries and small business, agricultural organizations, the major religious faiths, public and private welfare agencies, labor organizations and other groups.

The Maryland Commission is one of the most active of these state organizations. Subcommittees of a well organized central committee are operating in the state's twenty-two counties. Because of a serious shortage of agricultural workers, the commission to date has confined its activities largely to finding jobs for DP's in that field. On the ground that local interest is the basis for such a program, that neighbors of a sponsor are best qualified to pass on his ability to sponsor a displaced family, every application is first reviewed by the county committee, composed of the county agricultural agent and three leading citizens, before going to the central committee for consideration. The Maryland DP Commission is responsible for more DP's coming in under the state sponsorship than any other state committee.

Five members of the Maryland Commission were on the dock to welcome forty-one Ukrainians from the Marine Shark who held "assurances" for Maryland sponsors. The chairman himself was on hand, accompanied by one of the governor's personal assistants, the state chief of police, the director of the State Employment Service and a representative of the Ukrainian Relief Committee. Within a little more than two hours after the ship had docked, the forty-one were on a train en route to Baltimore in a special coach. They had been sympathetically briefed by the committee as to the reception plan and other pertinent matters, and were introduced to members of the state commission and the IRO representatives, whose warm words of welcome were touchingly responded to by one of the DP's.

When they arrived in Baltimore buses took them from the station to the armory where dormitory accommodations were available. Twelve Baltimore women of Ukrainian descent mingled among the newcomers, told them about their new state and even prepared native food for them. Suitable clothing was given to those who needed it.

By 8.30 the next morning the employers arrived—farmers all, drawn from the commission's list of 1,000 agricultural employers. After a final interview to check up on their arrangements for the DP family or individual, they departed with the newcomers assigned to them. In but a single case was it necessary to shift prearranged plans. One prospective employer changed his mind and expressed a desire for a family rather than an individual. He got his wish, and within an hour another employer who was reached by telephone came to take the single man to his farm.

Apparently as satisfied as the new arrivals, a number of the farmers said they had heard how well the previous new settlers had adjusted. They were sure they would be equally pleased with the ones to whom they were offering homes. One kindly looking old man, who said he was going to pay $35 a week and supply all food and housing, added, "Oh, they'll do better than that when they learn their way around. As for the children, we won't waste a day in getting them to school."

Back in New York the other 368 passengers from the Marine Shark were shepherded by representatives of voluntary national agencies. The activity around the desks of the United Service for New Americans, the Catholic War Relief Services, and the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society was especially great. But service was quick and efficient, and when I left the pier it was almost empty. The agency representatives told me there had been practically no unforseen occurrences, and that with a few exceptions all DP's would be on their way to their final destinations that same day.

The Marine Shark was the forerunner of six other ships, all chartered by the IRO, that were due to leave Hamburg for the United States in February. They were to bring 8,643 more DP's, landing them in New York, Boston or New Orleans.

With as many former occupants of Europe's DP camps arriving on our shores in February as had been admitted in the previous eight months since the Displaced Persons Act was passed, it looks as if the machinery is beginning to work as smoothly as the law allows. But the legislation itself is still inadequate and cumbersome. Now is the time to change it so that a job that no longer brooks delay can be well done.

The present act provides for the admission of 205,000 DP's over a two-year period beginning last July — a number shamefully below our fair share in meeting this responsibility. Then, too, the law contains a time element which means that if the machinery is not speeded up the total number now allowed will probably not get here. Less than 10 per cent of the 50,000 expected in the first six months have actually arrived! The difficulties of speeding up the process arise from the law itself and the detailed requirements involved.

The three-man commission, composed of Ugo Carusi, chairman, Edward M. O'Connor, and Harry N. Rosenfield, devotes the major part of its first semi-annual report to explaining the difficulties of operation. The act, the report says, fails in several respects to meet its purpose is "almost unworkable," and "includes certain features which defeat the objectives of the program by creating administrative hurdles . . . preventing expeditiously selecting and processing of displaced persons." Bills already in Congress — S. 311 and H. R. 1344 — embody the major part of these recommendations. These identical bills are sponsored in the Senate by Senators J. Howard McGrath (D.R.I.) and Matthew M. Neely (D.W.Va.) and in the House by Representative Emanuel Celler (D.N.Y.). They include the following major objectives:

1. Advance the cut-off date from December 12, 1945, to allow DP visas to persons who entered Germany up to April 21, 1947.

2. Eliminate nationality preferences.

3. Eliminate the agricultural priority and broaden the occupational preference to include a number of professions and skilled and semi-skilled trades.

4. Eliminate the house-and-job provision of the present law, as unnecessary, unworkable, and not required of regular immigrants.

5. Remove the mortgaging clause of the current DP law, which at present makes it necessary to subtract DP visas from future regular immigration quotas.

6. Ask for the admission of 400,000 displaced persons during a four-year period, instead of 205,000 in a two-year period specified in the present law.

7. Provide for a $5,000,000 loan to be made by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Displaced Persons Commission for DP inland transportation in the United States.

8. Propose stringent screening requirements which would weed out all undesirables.

9. Eliminate a provision allowing part of the total to be Volksdeutsche, making provision for the entry of this group in the regular immigration law.

This proposed legislation already has widespread backing of the press, as well as the welfare, religious, and civic groups which have long been asking for the admission of 400,000 displaced persons. Particularly active in its support is the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons, with headquarters in New York. If the recommended amendments go through Congress, DP's will be coming to our shores far faster and in far greater numbers than they are at present. It will then be the job of local communities to see that these newcomers are given every opportunity to make satisfactory lives for themselves. Is your community prepared for them?

Dr. Clothier revealed that Dr. Waksman, who is an alumnus of Rutgers and has been a member of its staff for more than twenty-five years, had assigned his patent to the Rutgers Research and Endowment Foundation, with the understanding that any net proceeds would be used to further research, particularly in microbiology, which has emerged in this century and covers the study of various microscopic forms of life, including the bacteria, fungi, yeasts, actinomycetes, protozoa and algae.

In keeping with the agreement with Dr. Waksman, the Rutgers Research and Endowment Foundation, a non-profit corporation created in 1946 to hold patents and other rights for the benefit of research at the state university, submitted a proposal to the university's trustees that it provide funds for the construction and equipment and assistance in the operation of an Institute of Microbiology as a co-ordinated branch of the university. The offer was accepted by the trustees.

Mr. Morgenthau called on American Jews to match by their generosity the austerity of Israel's Jews. During the last four months, he said, 110,000 Jews entered Israel and if that rate continues, the new state will receive 330,000 Jews in 1949.

The World's Greatest Need

By The Rev. Philip Cohen, Of London, England

If it is possible to summarize briefly the spiritual requirement most needed in the world to-day, I would say that what is required above all other things is the personal religious approach by the individual to God, the understanding by the individual that no external consideration must stand between him and the God he professes to worship, the understanding that there must develop on his part the effort sincerely and conscientiously to get as near as possible, in a spirit of humility, to the ethical attributes of this God in thought, in action and in intention. What is required more than anything else to-day is the vital realization by the individual, through a sense of humility and contrition, that nothing, absolutely nothing, no material consideration or personal ambition, must stand between him and the attainment of those religious objectives which mean so much to the future of this civilization of ours.

Why have I chosen now to tell you something which you have probably heard so many times before? Because, in brief, I believe that this civilization of ours stands or falls by its understanding urgently that there is this paramount spiritual need which must be met and answered as quickly as possible and because I believe also that the quality to do good, which is there all the time in all mankind but which is hidden at the moment beneath a tremendously hard exterior of materialistic obsession, can be brought to the surface through re-education, through the strenuous efforts and convictions of those who feel for the future, and that the real spirit, the Divine spirit, in man can be laid bare before its heavenly maker.

Now in developing this theme a little further, I think it might be useful and instructive to spend a few minutes in reflecting on the hymn we all know so well and love so much, the Adon Olam. This hymn, as we well know, is the most popular, as well as the most commonly used, of all our hymns. It is sung invariably in all the different rites, and by all sections of our community, all over the world. It is sung on Sabbaths and Holy Days, in services held on special occasions and, in Orthodox circles, it is recited twice daily. Thus, apart from the Shema, this hymn, perhaps more than anything else in our prayers, seems to unite all sections of our community with one religious purpose.

And what is it that the community seems to be so united in declaring and affirming in this hymn? Is it not the personal and ever-present contact between God and man, is it not the personal appeal which it makes direct to the heart of the individual which is its greatest strength? Does it not stimulate us when we are able to see so beautifully depicted a picture, on the one side, of the majesty and splendour of God and, next to it, by contrast, but still so very near to it, the low and pitiable human being with his most humble and most human of cries:

"My soul unto his hand divine
Do I commend; I will not fear;
My body with it I resign;
I dream no evil; God is near."

Here you see, in the Adon Olam, the whole community, regardless of sect or doctrinal belief, constantly reaffirming the vital need I have mentioned, constantly urging upon the individual that he must strive every day of his life to strengthen his contact with God, that he must make his direct approach in reverence and humility to the God in whom he professes to believe, and that all worldly considerations must be made secondary to this vital objective and put in their proper perspective.

It is interesting too to point out that, although the Adon Olam is perhaps one of the finest poems which have been added to our liturgy since Bible times and although it has, as I have already said, such a strong personal appeal to all, despite our varied religious interests and outlook, yet we do not know who wrote it or to what specific period it belongs. I know there are many who believe that its author was Solomon Ibn Gabirol, the renowned Spanish Jewish poet and philosopher, but there is no clear proof for this assertion and it is far more accurate to say to-day that so far all our research has failed to discover the author and date of the hymn.

Whilst it is true that the name of the author and the date it was composed are not entirely irrelevant, at the same time, however, these are matters of only secondary importance. The primary import of this hymn is not who wrote it or when it was written, but what religious ideals does it represent, what is its practical value in shaping and moulding the character of the individual for good, what great spiritual message does it bring the mind and heart of the reader? What matters most, or what should matter most to the individual is the ethical grandeur of its teaching, the touching simplicity of its great spiritual message, its concern with the real religious need of life. And the same spirit pervades all our great literature.

Take the Bible for example, take the great men of the Bible, the prophets, the poets, and the historians of the Bible. What do we really know about them personally? Very little, because they wished primarily to serve the world not as men of letters but as men of God, because they were anxious that, not they, but their writings, teachings and ideals should leave their indelible stamp on the religious life and development of Israel.

You have probably heard much of what I have said many times before; even so, I feel it is necessary to go on repeating these things because there is such a desperate urgency about everything to-day. I feel that the words of Rabbi Tarphon are so real and alive for us now: "The day is short, the work is great, and the workers are sluggish, and the master of the house is urgent." If we know what to do, then in Heaven's name let us do it quickly, let us to-day, as a community, by-pass everything else and try to make the world at large feel the presence of God, feel that there is a mighty and omnipotent power in the world, whose worship will bring goodness, justice and love to all.

Let us, even at the cost of all other things, make men feel that they dare no longer pay mere lip-service to the religious truths about which they speak so glibly, but that they must really begin to live them; that, for the sake of all which they hold dear, there must be nothing, absolutely nothing, standing between them and their intention to carry out the ideals of the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man in their own conduct and everyday life, that if they value the future at all, they must stand before God humbly and with a contrite heart resolved to build up the new world on those most practical religious ideals for which they profess to have fought and won the last terrible war.

EINSTEIN AT SEVENTY

The New York Times says: Scientists the world over are showering Einstein with their expressions of goodwill and admiration on this, his seventieth birthday. As for the general public, it is still puzzled by such startling conceptions as space-time and a closed universe, but it knows greatness when it sees it. And Einstein is great. "Copernicus of the twentieth century," said Max Planck of him. That tribute from an eminent physicist, a Nobel prize winner and an opponent of Hitler, means more than appears on the surface. To call a man a Copernicus is to call him a revolutionist, which is exactly what Einstein has been all his life—a revolutionist in both an intellectual and a humanitarian sense.

As a revolutionist Einstein has always hated arbitrary laws, conventions, fashions in ideas and clothes, coercion of one group by another, and pedantry. If he dislikes publicity and neckties, barbers and socks it is because he wants to reduce the art of living to its lowest terms and thus increase his freedom.

If he was not a brilliant university teacher it was because research overrode all other considerations and obligations. He never liked Prussians because "these cool blond people make me feel uneasy; they have no psychological comprehension of others." No wonder that in the First World War he refused to sign the famous Manifesto of the Ninety-two Intellectuals, which declared that "German culture and German militarism are identical."

It is his own "psychological comprehension of others" that sets him apart and explains seeming illogicalities in his political thinking. Here, for example, is a man who has been a pacifist all his life, who hated armies even as a boy, yet who realized the importance of what the splitting of the uranium atom by Hahn and Strassmann meant, and who persuaded President Roosevelt to institute the research that culminated in the atomic bomb.

And the atomic bomb having been achieved, he headed a group of frightened physicists who have been doing their best for nearly four years to warn mankind of the disaster by which it will be overtaken unless it works systematically and patiently for the maintenance of peace.

Einstein has not always been happy in his solutions of the political problems that have bedevilled the world for decades, but no one has ever heard him solemnly utter party slogans. His warmth of heart is such that he lends himself perhaps too readily to hopeless causes. "I am more philosopher than physicist," he once remarked.

Because he is a philosopher he derives as much pleasure from talking to the man who paints his house in Princeton as he does from discussing the unification of gravitation and electromagnetism with some mathematical physicist. Best of all, he has no illusions about himself.

Relativity has been considerably modified since he first announced it, but he accepts the modifications because he knows that they fit the observed facts. He has never indulged in any face-saving because he turned out to be wrong. Perhaps this is his distinguishing human characteristic. The world congratulates the scientist, the philosopher, the kindly, impulsive humanitarian.

You Have Cooperated Well Quebec Employers —

And it looks now as if most of the undergraduates from Quebec universities needing summer employment will be able to find it by the end of the school year.

The situation with regard to permanent jobs for graduates is also promising.

However, MORE summer opportunities STILL are needed for undergraduates and permanent openings for graduates, especially for "Arts graduates" whose training has not fitted them for any particular industry, but who will react quickly to an employer's advantage after brief training on the job.

Through the "clearance system" of the National Employment Service, the Executive and Professional Liaison Officer at your local office can locate a graduate or undergraduate from almost any course you can name, either from within the province or neighbouring provinces.
